

Pharaporn Wongsuwan
Faculty of Humanities
Srinakharinwirot University, Thailand

<Programs to have participated>

A short-term student-exchange program with ASEAN universities in 2015 hosted by School of Information and Communication, Meiji University

The reason I decided to go to Japan is that I wanted to gain experiences and to up-skill my Japanese because I have been studying Japanese as my major. The short term exchange program of School of Information and Communication, Meiji University was quite interesting. I was able to join the class teaching by Japanese teachers together with many friends so I had chances to fully practice my listening, speaking and writing skills.

After coming back to Thailand, I cannot help thinking of my good time in Japan. It was the time that I learned many things and spent good time with friends in totally enjoyable classroom. The teachers there took good care of me and friends were very kind supporting me a lot. This was unforgettable memory to me. Moreover, for now I am able to apply the knowledge and skills I have learned during the exchange program to my studies such as reading and writing skills are very useful in class. I can read Japanese articles and write in Japanese more fluently now. I think all the things and skills which I have learned at Meiji University would definitely be helpful.

I will study Japanese with my best effort. Thanks to teachers and friends, I had a great time in Japan during those 3 weeks. I am very grateful for what everyone has done for me.

The original text was written in Japanese and Thai.

English translation was prepared by Meiji University ASEAN Center

MEIJI UNIVERSITY